

ABOUT US.....

The historic, century-old 'Uluberia Institute & Library' is the pride of Uluberia. Esteemed individuals in their respective fields have joined and are still joining this organization as members, enhancing the Institute's glory. Any culturally-minded individual can become a member of this institution; the doors of the Institute are open to all. Parbati Chakraborty, the guardian and caretaker of the institution, is waiting to provide detailed information about this.

Various sub-committees of the institution manage literature, art & culture, drama, discussion forums, library services, monthly literary meetings, etc. Needless to say, interested members of the Institute eagerly participate in these.

The Institute's literary mouthpiece, "Satta," is published and distributed to members free of charge or at a nominal cost. Members can submit literary pieces for publication in this journal, and they are published if deemed suitable.

The Uluberia Institute and Library expect its members to participate in the institution's various endeavours, offer well-considered constructive opinions on various matters, and always strive to further glorify the great tradition of the Institute.

Generally, the Institute remains open daily: From 9:00 AM to 12:00 Noon. & From 4:00 PM to 7:00 PM
